

The FCC should refrain from interfering with Indiana's Telecommunication laws and allow the individual states to choose what level of protection they desire. Since joining Indiana's "No Call List" the number of harrassing calls to my home has dropped from 8 - 10 calls per day, to less than 5 calls per month. Telemarketers steal our time and disrupt our homes with thier calls. Until the Federal Government gets a backbone it should stay out of Indiana.